To Whom It May Concern:

This letter verifies that Zehao Pan has successfully completed the requirements of the Teaching Transcript program offered through the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning at Princeton University. The Teaching Transcript furnishes a record of pedagogy training and teaching experience.

All participants who complete this program must:

- complete a minimum of one semester as an Assistant in Instruction (At Princeton, an Assistant in Instruction may lead discussion sessions as part of a larger lecture class, lead laboratory or problem-solving sessions, or teach small sections of foreign language classes.)
- participate in a university-wide Assistant in Instruction Orientation offered by the McGraw Center
- complete a classroom observation and feedback session with a consultant from the McGraw Center
- participate in at least five pedagogy programs sponsored by the McGraw Center or its equivalent
- write a statement of teaching philosophy and an original syllabus

The McGraw Center consultants work individually with all Teaching Transcript participants to promote their development as self-reflective teachers. In these interactions, we seek to stimulate ongoing thinking about how to advance and assess student learning.

Further information can be found on the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning web page at mcgraw.princeton.edu or by calling (609) 258-2575.

Sincerely,
